Mr. Fugler stated, "Dodd-Frank made changes in the American financial regulatory environment that affects all federal financial regulatory agencies and almost every part of the nation's financial services industry. Some critics have attacked the law arguing it was not enough to prevent another financial crisis or more "bail outs", and others arguing it went too far and unnecessarily restricted financial institutions. The election will determine which group of critics gains momentum and there will be, I'm sure, significant changes to follow."
